BITTER BATTLE IN PROSPECT OVER 172 EDWARDS' LETTERS

Flaming Love Epistles From
Bobby to Margaret Crain
To Be Offered

CONFESSION RECORDED

Considered the Most Damaging Evidence in The State's Case

By David F. Sentner
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Oct. 4.—(INS)—Flaming love epistles—172 of them—from Bobby Edwards, Don Juan of a mining town, to Margaret Crain, 22-year-old music teacher, of East Aurora, N. Y., will provide a bitter legal battle today in the "American Tragedy" murder trial.

The purple-toned missives have been offered in evidence by the prosecution in an attempt to show that while Edwards, the 21-year-old, handsome defendant, was promising to marry Freda McKechnie, he was twitting by corresponding passionately with Margaret.

Most of the love-letters are known to be unprintable but several of them will be read to the jury if the Court admits them to evidence.

The sheaf of erotica was identified by handwriting experts as having been written by Edwards. They covered three months prior to the finding of the body of 27-year-old Freda in Harvey's Lake with a deep gash on the back of her head.

The dates showed that Edwards wrote something as often as three times a day.

The signed confessions of Edwards were in the Court record today, the most damaging evidence in the State's case.

Edwards, re-vamping earlier stories of the death of his childhood sweetheart, told in his confessions how Freda had informed him she was to become a mother.

He telephoned her from the doctor's office a week before he bludgeoned her to death during a midnight swimming party. They took a walk in Kirby Park under the moonlight. He suggested an operation or marriage.

Freda said: "I would rather get married."

Edwards promised to meet her. They would go to Virginia and he would get a job and they would start things over again. He wrote a letter to Margaret Crain and said their engagement was off. But he never mailed this letter.

The thought that he might get rid of Freda slipped insidiously into his mind, Edwards said in his statement.

A voice kept whispering into his ear, "Now is the time to do away with Freda."

Freda died on Monday, July 30. The Wednesday before, he took the black-jack belonging to his father. Edwards said he took it for protection during a week-end automobile trip "to York State" to see Margaret.

He got Freda to give him her bathing suit even before the trial. He kept her bathing suit—a gay, orange one—in his closet at home until the night of the murder.

On a rainy Monday night, he took Freda for a ride.

Sitting in the car on that night while Freda stopped off for twenty minutes to visit her niece at Harvey's Lake, the voice of evil began shouting again Edwards declared in his statement.

"I had my girl in New York State (Margaret Crain) and I wanted to do away with Freda to clear up the situation," Edwards said in his confession. "So now was the time to do away with Freda."

They waded toward the left part of the lake where it was darker.

Then—"As she swam by me I hit her on the head with my jack."

Freda lurched upward from the water. Then she sank. Edwards took her by the hips and threw her body into deep water.

The State plans to close its case today and then the defense will have its say.

Edwards, of the poker face, does not seem worried about the case but he appeared depressed about a report from upstate New York that Margaret Crain had said she was "through with him."

"SMILIN' THROUGH"

Reprinted from the Saturday Evening Post, September 22, 1934
(Copyright, 1934, by Curtis Publishing Company)

When this Administration came into power the country had a depression to liquidate. It begins to look now as if it has both a depression and a New Deal to liquidate.

The last Administration went out on an ebb tide of confidence; the New Deal came in on a flood tide of over-confidence.

The platform of the Democratic Party and the pre-election promises of its candidates carried sound and reassuring pledges to the country.

But the new Administration was hardly warm in the saddle before it began to ignore these pledges, until today there is no document in the history of political parties so thoroughly discredited as the Democratic platform.

At the same time the Administration, in the name of the existing emergency, began to develop plans and policies and to try experiments that caused great uneasiness to men of experience in business and government.

On a foundation that ignored the inexorable fundamental laws of human nature and of economics a structure was raised that began to settle out of plumb. A babel of voices issued from it, calling on everyone to see and to admire and to come in.

Those who preferred to stay outside with their feet on the ground were roundly berated. The air was full of epithets for the recalcitrant—Tory, reactionary, cannibal, obscene, adherent to the law of tooth and claw.

To those who were building it, it was the Tower Beautiful, reaching up to heaven, and they were profoundly shocked that anyone could lack confidence in its soundness.

There must be reasons for the steadily increasing lack of confidence in the Tower, for if there is one thing that every man wants, it is confidence in the present and future . . .

NRA needs no comment. Its failure to function according to promise and its success in fomenting strikes through 7A is spread clear on the record.

Against this, NRA has credits, but the debits probably more than wipe them out.

AAA, thanks to the drought and its plow-under program at a time when we need all the food that we can grow, has succeeded in raising prices to the point where consumers, with sharply curtailed incomes, are facing mounting prices, while NRA has raised costs to farmers, who have little money to buy even at the old levels.

But the country has been given a nice Russian assurance that there will be some kind of food for all the people, even though they may have to go without some kinds of food that they have always had in plenty. The pork that went into tankage is probably one of them, for as this is written the retail price of pork has just jumped four cents a pound.

And speaking of Russia, where is the half billion dollars' worth of orders we were propagandized into believing we would get from her right on the heels of recognition?

These new bureaus look to be a sad mess all the way from AAA to XYZ.

Perhaps AAA's chief is as much at sea about the proper treatment for agriculture as he is about that for our merchant marine. Apparently he has a plow-under complex, for he is now asking for a short crop of shipping.

Then there is that bright idea of planting belts of trees north and south in the arid and semi-arid regions, though that project probably originated in some brain-trust brain.

Certainly business could not have made a greater muddle out of things than has Government in business.

But American business is much cleaner and better than the Government, through its investigations, has tried to represent it.

For fifty years at least, like a swift-running stream, business has tended steadily to purify itself.

START SOLICITATION FOR SCOUT FUNDS HERE ON TUESDAY

Active Campaign Will Then
Be Under Way in This District

SELECT THE CAPTAINS

Lower End Quota is Placed at $1750 in The Drive

It was decided to have the general solicitation for scout funds in Bristol to begin on Tuesday evening, October 9th, after a conference including Community Chairman Robert C. Ruel, Statistician Herbert A. Pettit, County Campaign Organizing Chairman William Burgess, County Finance Chairman Edmund H. Lovett, and Scout Executive William F. Livermore.

Captains have been selected for all the wards of Bristol, and the neighboring communities by Chairman Ruel to raise the lower end quota of $1750. The captains include: First ward, Harold Hunter; second ward, Howard Smoyer; third ward, John Hess; fourth ward, Joseph Mountney; fifth ward, Roy Fry; and sixth ward, Marvin Skeath. Joseph H. Mintzer will captain Edgely with Lester Shoemaker leading Tullytown. The organization of Croydon will be directed by A. B. Stiles, and Walter Pitonka is mobilizing the solicitors for Bristol Township.

Over one hundred men have stepped forward to volunteer their services to "back up" Robert C. Ruel to "put over the campaign." A number of additional solicitors are being secured to complete the organizations in several of the wards, and outlying sections.

$1545 of the 1935 Campaign Objective of $7600 has already been contributed towards the maintenance of the Bucks County Council; Cubbing, Boy Scout, and Seascout Program. The Campaign does not officially start until this coming Saturday, October 6th. "Every effort is being made to complete the solicitation of every individual in Bucks County by Sunday, October 14th," said William Burgess of Morrisville, County Chairman of the Organization Committee, who, with Edmund H. Lovett of Yardley, has been devoting hundreds of hours of volunteer time to completely organizing the 335 solicitors.

As George F. Tyler, of Neshaminy Farms, near Newtown, presented his pledge to President Thomas Ross, he commented on the Boy Scout movement by referring to his interest in its progress. He was delighted to give his support to such a worthwhile effort, and to increase his pledge to help carry his share of the pressing demands for the Scout Headquarters service during 1935.

Along with the contribution of Mr. Tyler, a number of other civic leaders have immediately come forward with their contributions to indicate their hearty approval of Scouting, and the work of the local county council. Included among them are Charles J. Biddle, of Andalusia; George L. Biddle, and Mrs. Valeria Cedar, of Riegelsville; Arthur M. Eastburn, Frank Hart, Mr. and Mrs. William Mercer, Thomas Ross, and Edward L. Steckel, of Doylestown; Miss Edith Newlin Fell, and Edward W. Fell, of Holliston; Ralph M. Fox, of Morrisville.

"The Biggest Fish I Ever Caught."

That is the subject upon which a number of well-known fishermen have been interviewed by a Courier reporter. Contrary to a usual "fish" stories the sizes given in these interviews have been given accurately to the author of the story.

ARTICLE IX.

With the strength of a 25-pound tuna pitted against his own for 20 to 25 minutes, Nathan Hoffman, Mill street merchant, for three succeeding days couldn't have forgotten about a deep-sea fishing expedition last August if he wanted to.

The reason was his arm ached. And the reason the arm ached, according to the teller of this story, was because he was an amateur as deep-sea fishing was concerned.

"I pulled with my arm, instead of depending upon the harness about my shoulders—and my arm surely was

Began Career As Law Clerk

Emma and Alexander Beykman were Hoover's first big case, and his sending of Emma on the historic voyage aboard the Buford signified the end of America's jittery anarchism scare.

It also signified the rise of John Edgar Hoover, who has built the world's greatest investigating agency within a decade. Following is the second installment of a series of articles telling how and portraying the man.

By International News Service

(Copyright, 1934, International News Service)
WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—(INS)—Yes, "Red Emma" knows Hoover. So do Gaston Means, and old Doc Cook, and Machine Gun Kelly, and Al Capone. So do thousands upon thousands of other law violators smaller in stature but no less guilty.

Hoover doesn't hate them as they do him. He speaks with a sort of easy contempt for the latter-day gangsters and tough boys whom his "fellows" have tamed so regularly by way of jamming machine guns into their quivering bellies and slamming them in jail.

For Emma and "old Gaston Means," he cherishes a sort of left-handed affection. He rather admires Emma's courage, it seems, and he is constantly entertained by the wild and amusing tales that Gaston Means, even yet continues to toss up for Hoover to disprove.

But he wouldn't hesitate to slap Emma back in jail if she re-entered the U. S. and violated a Federal law. And for all his amusement at Means' antics, he has him where he intends him to stay—in jail.

To hear him talk about these sleazy, peculiar and dangerous figures whom he chases around the nation with telephone, gun and fast moving men, one would think he had undoubtedly come to his position from a life of contact with them. He hasn't.

Most detectives and policemen catch thieves because they know them familiarly, if not in individual cases, at least as a type.

To the contrary, Hoover has had very little close personal contact with these people from day to day. True, he handles every important case personally that comes to his "fellows," attention, but most patrolmen in Washington could beat him at spotting pickpockets or racing touts around town. That's because he started at crime detection from an entirely different angle than probably any other man ever did.

Started as Clerk

For Hoover started his career as a clerk in the Library of Congress. Like any well brought up youngster, he had his mind made up that he "would amount to something," but just exactly what he wasn't sure.

While he was still a youngster working in the Library of Congress after graduation from Central High School and wondering just how to manage the next step, his father died. Hoover had a mother to think about. His brother and sister were already married and gone from home.

He went to George Washington University at night after the best American tradition of the boy who is not ashamed to get down and dig for what he wants when he knows that his family and his friends understand and are with him and—well, his official biography in the Department of Justice runs as follows:

"John Edgar Hoover was born January 1, 1895, in the District of Columbia and was educated in the public schools of the District of Columbia, graduating from Central

Urges Nine Jurors' Verdict Instead of Entire Twelve

HARRISBURG, Oct. 4.—(INS)—Conviction or acquittal of criminals on agreement of nine jurors instead of by a unanimous verdict of 12 is the suggestion of Major Lynn G. Adams, superintendent of the State Police, for speeding up court trials.

"Such a procedure would eliminate many of the hung juries," Major Adams believes, "and would thus eliminate the necessity of a retrial. Ordinarily, the verdict of nine members would be no different from that of 12 members but it could be reached in less time."

Major Adams also pointed out that Appellate Courts are available for reviewing criminal cases and that it is their duty to remand cases in which a verdict has been reached that cannot be supported by evidence.

Capital cases, in which a death penalty is a potential verdict, should not be included in the changed procedure he advocates, Major Adams said. In those cases, the police head is convinced the jury should come to an unanimous verdict.

Concluding his argument for a nine-vote majority verdict, Major Adams pointed out:

"In almost any group of 12 persons there is one with prejudices who is hard to win over to any verdict."

ALLEGES DAUGHTER WAS TAKEN TO HER MOTHER FROM HERE

Leonard Egrande, Trenton
Avenue, Reports Daughter,
Four Years Old, Missing

BLAMES BROOKLYN TRIO

Police Are Asked To Investigate and Learn Whereabouts of Child

A four-year old girl was enticed from her father's residence and spirited away to her mother in Brooklyn early last evening, according to a report filed with the police who have been asked to investigate.

The parents of the child are separated, the father residing here and the mother in Brooklyn. The daughter of the couple has been living with her father.

The little youngster, Angelina, 4, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Egrande, according to the police was taken from here to Brooklyn by two men and a woman.

The Brooklyn trio arrived here yesterday morning in an automobile and drove about the town throughout the day. They visited with friends here until about four o'clock yesterday afternoon when little Cecelia Mauro, 6, Elm street, went over to the home of Angelina and invited her to go to the store with her for some candy. It was while the youngster was on Elm street that it is alleged she was picked up and taken to Brooklyn.

Leonard Angelina, the father of the child, reported the missing child to the police last night and asked their co-operation.

The police are investigating the case and making an effort to learn whether or not the child was taken by the alleged trio and where.

"The Girl From Missouri" Is A Fine Harlow Film

Jean Harlow in "The Girl From Missouri," will be the attraction at the Grand Theatre Thursday and Friday nights. This is the much discussed picture in which Jean Harlow is making such a big success. She is supported by Lionel Barrymore, Franchot Tone, Lewis Stone and Patsy Kelly. It is an adult picture that has everything in it to make a picture good. It is thrilling, romantic and gives the great Jean a wonderful field to express the talent which she possesses. It has comedy in which Miss Harlow proves she is a real comedienne, and rises to heights of emotion.

As usual Lionel Barrymore is superb and handles the complications in which he finds himself in a way that only Barrymore can. Franchot Tone, that fast-rising young star, who is becoming more popular in each picture, is undoubtedly worthy of particular mention as he handles his parts in a manner that would do credit to an old timer. There will also be another Silly Symphony cartoon, "The Wise Little Hen", an educational tour called "Morocco Nights" and news events.

On Saturday, matinee and night, Robert Montgomery will appear in "Hide-Out," another picture that is causing crowds everywhere.

IMPERFECT TRAFFIC LIGHTS

Traffic lights flashing red and green to prevent accidents may be the cause of fatal highway collisions. The color blind cannot distinguish between these two colors and often proceed on a red light believing it the green "go" signal.

Dr. Joseph P. Ritenour, of Pennsylvania State College, finds that 5 per cent of his students are color blind, and concludes that to at least 5 per cent of the motoring public the red and green on the traffic lights are confusing.

Blue and yellow register with the color blind as decisively as red and green with the color conscious, and frequently are recommended by spectroscopists for traffic control purposes. They are backed up by scientific facts.

It would be unfair and unjust to refuse drivers' licenses to the color blind, but it would require months of propaganda and special control to break the motoring public of the habit of stopping on the red and starting on the green. Many would immediately accept the blue as substitute for the traditional green, but yellow or amber, having long been used as a caution signal, would confuse all drivers until they became accustomed to the change.

Traffic control is a scientific matter and should be treated scientifically. Usually, it is placed in the hands of the least scientific members of the community.

WINGS

Man has ever been able to go anywhere and do anything on wings of imagination. Today his wings are those of an airplane.

These new wings are bringing within the reach of man for the first time the remotest regions of the world and vast wealth which has been beyond his reach. Aviation is tapping valuable mineral deposits heretofore undiscoverable but inaccessible. In the Rockies, among the mountain peaks of South and Central America, in the mountain recesses of Europe, prospectors have discovered mother lode but have been unable to bring out much of this hidden wealth because of insurmountable obstacles which made the ordinary methods of transportation useless.

When a single airplane can transport 400 tons of mining machinery into a region surrounded by towering 15,000-foot peaks it can no longer be said that mineral wealth anywhere is beyond the reach of the mining engineer. The airplane is destined to supplant the pack-mule, the llama, and the mountain switch-back rail-road.

Where are the wisecracks who a score of years ago ridiculed the idea of transportation by air? There are probably still carrying a canard.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If it fails to do this, your bowels are clogged, don't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your head is full. Skin often breaks out in itches. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely. But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resist a substitute. 25c at drug stores. ©1931 C. M. Co.

"I'll use the side door," he went on. "I can go out and come in that way without disturbing anyone. Mr. Broderick said."

"I think you'd better keep both the keys," she said aloud.

He laid the front door key on the table and shook his head. "No. One door's enough for me," he insisted, "and perhaps you'll show me the way out now, so I'll know how to find it when I bring the rest of my traps tomorrow."

He picked up the empty suitcases, and the thought flashed through Susan's mind that a person must be poor who owned only two suitcases, battered ones at that, and had to make two trips with them, to carry all his worldly goods from one rooming house to another.

That was real poverty, she thought as she led the way down the stairs and past the dining room door to the narrow rear hall that ended in three steps at the side door of the house.

She noticed, as Mr. Sholes put out his hand to open the door, that the sleeve of his gray overcoat was frayed a little at the cuff and that his ungloved hand was chapped. He was just as shabby as she was in her faded old blue flannel.

"Do you hate to wear gloves?" she heard herself asking him, and it seemed to her that the question was asking itself.

He nodded his head. "I've lived out west for a long time where we don't have to wear them unless we want to—and I just don't have the habit, I guess."

"I've never had it," said Susan. She had an absurd feeling that it was a sort of bond between them that they both disliked to wear gloves.

"I'll bet he likes to walk around in the cold and the dark, too, just the way I do," she told herself when he had stepped out into the side yard where the arc light in front of the house threw cold purple-black shadows across the snow.

"Goodbye," his voice came to her from the darkness.

"Goodnight," Susan closed the door and stood leaning against it for a minute or two. She was filled with the oddest sense of excitement and thrill. A feeling that was entirely different from her feeling of satisfaction over her engagement to Wallace.

"Something's happened at last in this old rookery," she thought, with a fine feeling of exhilaration, as she started up the stairs to the rear hall—in this old rookery where nothing ever happened.

Her uncle was standing in the doorway at the end of the rear hall, waiting for her with the news that Wallace had arrived.

"Not so fast, young woman!" He stopped her as she murmured, "Thanks for telling me," and tried to squeeze past him. His breath was thick with the odor of the liquor that he had been drinking from the brown glass bottle on his desk—"bitters," as he called it. Everyone in the family knew that he drank a great deal too much. But because he usually did it in the solitude of his little room, behind the closed door, none of them ever mentioned it to him or tried to stop him.

"That was Mr. Sholes, you were talking to just now," he said.

"I was showing him where the side door is. He seems to have taken your hint about using it."

"Anna would have shown him where the side door is," he said with the air of a man who has a full staff of servants at his beck and call. "There was no need for you to do it—and I don't like it, Susan! I don't like it a little bit! Before dinner when we talked over this matter of taking in a paying guest we all agreed that it wouldn't be necessary to become friendly with him—and now, crack out of the box, I find you lallygagging with him in the back hall, while Wallace is cooling his heels at the front door!"

Head of 'D. J.' Investigators Began Career As Law Clerk

High School in 1913. During the same year, 1913, Mr. Hoover entered the Library of Congress as a clerk, and enrolled in George Washington University Law School as an evening student. He received the degrees of LL.B. and LL.M. from George Washington University and has been admitted to practice before the bar of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, and the United States Supreme Court, and the United States Court of Appeals.

And it was with the equipment so obtained that he found himself looking around for a job—naturally, as a Government lawyer. He had no idea that he was moving into position as the man who would have to fend off politicians on the hunt for jobs for their cousins, and would have to change his telephone number at home once a month so he can preserve what little privacy there may be left for him.

Hoover got into the Department of Justice quite by chance as a clerk, as he was rounding out his college career. Government service, while it may have its honorary rewards, allow slim financial margins for those who deal in it. But the right sort of man seems, sometimes, to gravitate into the right sort of spot.

And that brings us up to Hoover's first big case.

How Hoover began to take an interest in criminal identification and how he finally found that "hot potato," the Bureau of Investigation, shifted to his hands, will be told in tomorrow's installment of the story of his life.

"SMILIN' THROUGH"

There have been and probably still are crooked bankers. There have been and still are crooked business men, but the evils to which the attention of the country has been called so stridently and so demagogically are largely the misdeeds of the parasites on business and not of producing executives.

To police the crooks and to punish them is the affair of Government, and no sensible man wishes it to tolerate unfair or dishonest practices.

However, taking American business as a whole, its ethics, its methods and its personnel will compare favorably with those of the Government, and it has the great advantage of experience and common sense.

If we are ever to pull out of the depression it must be done by American business, freed from the brain-trust shackles that bind it, and from the unfair competition of the Government.

Even with its power to tax to the limit and then to engage in tax-free business to the disadvantage of those from whom it takes tax money, Government is not making a showing in its ventures that encourages one to believe that it can make money or save money for the country.

The pump has been primed with billions, but when the priming slackens it shows signs of sucking air, perhaps because the wrong pump is being primed. That pump simply brings up what is poured into it from the generous buckets of Government.

Probably the failure of business to get fully back on the job has been due to the persistent attacks on it by Administration spokesmen—a campaign that smacks of an effort to discredit private business so that there will be less opposition to the steady encroachments of Government in almost every field of production and distribution.

Another reason for the growing lack of confidence is the kind and quality of advisers and administrators with whom the President has surrounded himself.

If they are as a class competent to plan and to run the business of the country, then practical experience and training in industry have lost their meaning.

As advisers they have pet social theories, some thoroughly exploded by repeated trials in the past, some ready to explode as soon as they are tried on our devoted country.

As administrators they are, under the present set-up, at once legislators, prosecutors, jury and judge.

The Government service is, of course, full of sound, able men in positions of importance, but these are not the most influential of those in office today.

There is, too, a large number of able, hard-working men in positions of minor importance and in clerkships, in spite of the Tammany methods and standards that are beginning to obtain in the distribution of Federal jobs.

It has been pretty well proved that AAA spells one kind of trouble; that NRA spells another kind and that TA spells strikes.

In the face of these failed or failing experiments, in view of the doubts that are creeping in, why does not the Administration take the country fully into its confidence?

After all, it is our country and not a laboratory for a small group of professors to try out experiments that bid fair to result in an explosion and a stink.

Up to the present time, the critics of the New Deal have refrained from including the President in their strictures on it.

In fact, they almost invariably preface their remarks with a few cheery, pleasant words about the President, excepting him from their criticisms as if he were the trusting head of a business house who did not know what his partners were doing.

With all due respect for the office, we do not believe that the President should be exempted from criticism for the acts of his advisers and appointees.

No President of the United States has ever enjoyed such exemption, and in the case of some of our Presidents criticism degenerated into untrue and libelous personal abuse. But every decent American hopes that party politicians will in the future refrain from descending into the sewer for their campaign material.

President Roosevelt has qualities that make for great personal popularity—charm of manner, sympathy and the ability to keep cheerful and smiling through trying times—but the country cannot come back on charm, important as that may be in private life.

In the end the President must stand or fall on his official record, and that includes the records of his appointees. He has demanded and been given almost unlimited power, and he will be judged by the use that he makes of that power.

Signs are multiplying that the country will not continue to take the New Deal lying down or to tolerate in office those left-wing New Dealers who are suspected of dealing from the bottom of the pack to circumvent the Constitution and to impose on America a new social order that is repugnant to our ideal of liberty.

Though interviews and speeches, intended to be reassuring, on the profit motive and other matters are coming from Washington, and attempts are being made to co-ordinate the North and South Poles, the country will demand, sooner or later, a full and frank statement from the President, clearly defining and clarifying his plans and policies.

Even the severest critics of the Administration want to see it headed up the road to success.

But that is a hard road that will call for the scrapping of many of the half-baked theories of the amateurs who are imposing their ideas on the country.

Unless the President discards their theories and all opportunist policies, and discloses his plans in plain Anglo-Saxon words, a steadily increasing minority that faces the future with grave doubts and grave faces may quickly become a majority.

Perhaps if they knew what was in the President's mind for the future they, too, could go "Smilin' Through."

Or perhaps not.

PENNSYLVANIA NEEDS MORE CONCRETE ROADS

S UDDENLY, after tiresome miles of nervous driving on ordinary roads, a pleasing gray ribbon of true and even concrete swings into view. Jolts... wheel-kicks... tire grumbling... nervous tension slip behind you. You settle back at ease in your seat. Your fingers relax their grip on the wheel. Your car leaps ahead. Motoring regains its zest. You're on smooth, non-skid concrete, where driving is a pleasure.

Concrete roads are safer. You're less apt to skid. You'll stop more quickly, more smoothly. Your tires are less apt to blow out. Visibility is better. You drive more easily, more skilfully—because you're relaxed.

You save up to 2 cents a mile in gas, oil, tires and car repairs on concrete compared with inferior surfaces.

ville; Mrs. M. Anna Smith, of Newtown; Edmund H. Lovett, of Yardley; Albert J. Thompson, of Wycombe; and the Misses Troemner, of Point Pleasant.

Industrial concerns are giving their support, among them being Riegel Paper Corporation of Milford, N. J., and King Farm Company, and Warner Company of Morrisville.

"There will be an additional decline in the number of boys in Scouting in the Bucks County Council, unless, a Secretary is put on full-time to take care of the necessary correspondence, filing, registration, records, and mimeographing. The Scout Executive must be relieved from the confining secretarial duties, so that he may serve more efficiently as our Executive," said Edmund H. Lovett, of Yardley, chairman of the finance committee.

The Six District Plan for completion in 1937 will provide the organization features necessary to carry on the work of Scouting to as many boys, and men as were served during 1931. The Six District Plan will not be accomplished on the present amount of office help. Executive contacts, telephone communication, and frequent correspondence are necessary; to an alert, and aggressive organization that will be required to serve as many boys and men.

The Bucks County Council Executive Board knows from experience they can serve the number of individuals that should be in Scouting with the raising of $7600. The following items are absolutely necessary to add to the 1934 budget of $5250, if the Council is going to show an increase over the 1934 membership, and start on the Six District Plan of the Bucks County Council Reorganization:

1. Full-time secretary (Mon., Tues., Wed., Thurs., Fri.)
2. Telephone service.
3. Office hours: 9-12 and 1-5 (above days.)
4. Leader's Bulletin (bi-monthly.)
5. Increased field contact service.
6. Honor badges awarded (Star, Life, Eagle and Quartermaster.)
7. Technical speakers at training courses.

"Our County Boyhood and Manhood will only become better citizens as they are confronted with, and feel, character building experiences," remarked President Ross, as he spoke of the campaign objectives to make it possible to guide boys through their ninth to eighteenth years, with a program cultivating sterling character, clean citizenship, helpfulness to others, and purposeful leisure.

ART SHADES FOUND IN BREEDER TULIPS Striped Tulips Are Vaid Accents

Modern late flowering tulips, concerning the origin of which there is much mystery, are chiefly selected strains of the general class of late tulips known as Breeders, so called because the striped tulips, the medium of the gambling craze during Holland's tulipomania, develop from these self-colored tulips by breaking out in stripes from time to time, for no well understood reason, although there are numerous theories.

The Darwins are honored by being given a separate class from the Breeders, but the latter are now sharing the popularity of the Darwins because of their soft and unusual colorings, notably the buffs, browns and bronzes, often intermingled with purples and dark reds. These subtle art shades are coming to be more and more appreciated and offer some of the finest tulips there are. The Breeders require the same treatment as the Darwins.

They have yellows in their color range, there being no true yellows in the Darwin class. Some of these handsome tulips should be included in every order. One of the finest is the bronze and purple giant, Louis XIV, one of the finest of all tulips and now at a price which puts it within reach.

Win Back Pep . . . Vigor . . . Vitality

Medical authorities agree that your kidneys contain 15 MILES of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy.

If you have trouble with too frequent bladder passages with scanty amount causing burning and discomfort, the 15 MILES of kidney tubes need washing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and vitality, getting up nights, lumbago, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.

If kidneys don't empty 2 pints every day and get rid of 4 pounds of waste matter, your body will take up these poisons causing serious trouble. It may knock you out and lay you up for many months. Don't wait. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS . . . a doctor's prescription . . . which has been used successfully by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. They give quick relief and will help to wash out the 15 MILES of kidney tubes.

But don't take chances with strong drugs or so-called "kidney cures" that claim to fix you up in 15 minutes, for they may seriously injure and irritate delicate tissues. Trust in DOAN'S PILLS . . . the old reliable relief that contains no "dope" or habit-forming drugs. Be sure you get DOAN'S PILLS at your druggist. © 1934, Foster-Milburn Co.

A few years ago it was one of the very expensive beauties.

The brown tones of the Breeders combine beautifully with the pink and rose tones of the Darwins. They have the same great height of stem and size of bloom.

Another late blooming race of tulips comes all in stripes and offers a most interesting variety in planting that always attracts interest. They are best planted in groups by themselves, as the stripes of varying colors do not harmonize with other tulips. The striped tulips are divided into three classes, bizarres, byblooms and Rembrandt tulips. The first are yellow and brown, red, or purple striped. The second class is subdivided into rose and violet byblooms, one being in tones of red and white, and the other in lavender, purple and white. The Rembrandts are striped Darwin tulips having the same soft colorings striped with white.

A bed of these striped tulips is a novelty in the garden and some of them should be included in any bulb order. They are fine to plant in small groups over a border, giving it an unusual character. The variegations are sometimes in regular patterns and sometimes over all. The character of the striping is sometimes in the way of flames up the midrib of the petal, and in others a pattern about the edges of the petals, feathered.

VARIETY OF SPORTS COSTUMES INTEREST ALL AT MONTE CARLO

By Nadia De Beaud (I. N. S. Fashion Correspondent)

PARIS — (INS) — The pool at Monte Carlo Beach is always a picturesque spot. First of all, it is graced by about two dozen American Polles girls, who amble around it in various costumes effects. The bathers lie around on light mattresses, which are thrown down wherever they wish, or they sit on comfortable chairs, sunning the whole day long. Everybody has a dog, carefully held in leash to avoid dog fights.

I saw Mrs. Dorland Doyle, daughter of Charlie Munn, of Philadelphia, in a blue knitted ribbed bathing suit, conservatively open at the neck, promenadeing her Abersee terrier.

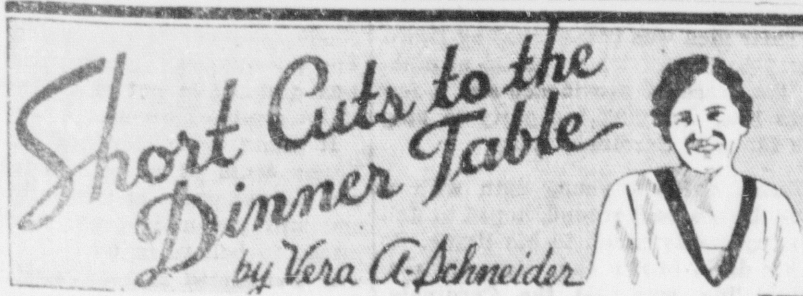

The celebrated Lady Warwick, lunching close by, in a white crepe dress, pleated skirt and sleeveless, together with Sir Ronald Clark, British Ambassador to France, and her son, in a bright yellow shirt. Mrs. Frances Twomey, of New York, wore white duck with big pockets and short sleeves.

Stuffed Potatoes

Allow half of a large Idaho Potato to each person. Bake them, and when done, remove from oven and cut in half neatly with a sharp knife. Remove the inside and mash adding cream, butter, salt and red pepper. Beat until light. Refill the shells, having the filling nicely rounded over top. Sprinkle with grated cheese and paprika and return to oven until delicately browned.

Glazed Sweet Potatoes

Use sweet potatoes of uniform size.

Column Devoted to Various Ways of Making the Humble Potato Appealing

Souffle potatoes are very easily made and are not to be confused with potato souffle. To make the souffle potatoes, it is first necessary, of course, to wash, peel and slice the potatoes, in thin even slices, making the shape oval. Dry them on cloth and drop just a few at a time in deep hot fat. Remove when tender and allow them to cool. Drop them again into the hot fat and they will then puff and become brown quickly. Drain on absorbent paper, salt and serve at once.

Cook in boiling salted water until tender. Drain, remove skins and cut in halves lengthwise. Place in buttered pan, sprinkle thickly with brown sugar and pour one half cupful melted butter over all. Place in a slow oven and bake until brown, basting occasionally. This may be varied by making a sirup of one cupful of brown sugar, two tablespoonfuls of butter and one-half cupful of water.

Duchess Potatoes

3 cupfuls mashed potatoes—hot or cold

1 egg yolk—beaten

Salt and pepper to taste. Combine ingredients and form into flat cakes. Brush with beaten egg white, place on greased pan and brown in a moderately hot oven.

Pan Browned Potatoes

Use small potatoes. Wash, peel and place them in roaster, turning them in the gravy. Continue to let meat cook until potatoes are tender and nicely browned—about thirty minutes. Serve on platter around roast.

Small Potato Balls

Wash and pare potatoes, shaping them into balls with vegetable cutter. Soak for fifteen minutes in cold water, then remove and dry between towels.

BRISTOL GRID PLAYERS PUTTING UP GOOD GAME

The Tacony-Overbrook Club, managed by Joe Meiman, opened their football season Sunday against the powerful Frankford Trojans and lived up to their advanced notice as having one of the best professional traveling clubs in the East, by holding the home club to two field goals against the visitors' one, losing by the close score of 6-3.

The Frankford Club with three former All-Americans in their line-up, failed to cross the goal line of Overbrook and had to resort to field goals to win, mainly through the efforts of Joe Lodge, the former Princeton star, who booted two between the cross bars.

The real feature of the game was "Gunner" Corrigan, Bristol boy, who came through for Meiman's club in the third period by tying the count with a beautiful drop kick from a difficult angle on the 40-yard line, which drew rounds of applause from the crowd.

Corrigan is playing end position and is a tower of strength to Overbrook as he is big and powerful and stopped numerous end-runs which prevented Frankford from scoring. Other Bristol boys who will be heard from before the season ends are Matt Hutchison, Pete Chome and George Dougherty.

Tacony-Overbrook will play in Easton Sunday, followed by games with Clifton Heights, Brooklyn, Shamokin, Rochester, Shenandoah, and Stapleton, N. Y.

FURMAN A. C. TO PRACTICE

There will be practice called for members of Furman A. C. football team this evening, at 7 p. m. All players are asked to attend. Sunday's game is with Beverly, N. J.

ST. ANN'S PLAYERS TO MEET

LOWER MERION TO PLAY HIGH SCHOOL JAYVEES

By Jack Orr

Today on the local high school grid-iron the Bristol High School Jayvees eleven plays host to Lower Merion's second team, one of the best clubs in Philadelphia and surrounding vicinity.

This club has lost only three games in the last five years, a remarkable record. One of these setbacks was the 13-0 defeat handed them by the Cardinal and Gray of Bristol last year, on the Lower Merion field.

These boys are out to avenge this defeat and will be fighting hard every minute to make up for their poor showing in last season's contest.

Coach W. E. Dougherty is placing his strongest possible J. V. lineup on the field today. His tentative starters are: center, Accardi; guards, C. Mignoni and Schiffer; tackles, O'Boyle and Abbott; ends, McCahan and Niccol; quarter, Zefferi; half backs, "Walt" Tomlinson and "Lou" Tomlinson; full, Pica.

TIGERS READY TO MAKE SERIES EVEN

By Davis J. Walsh

(I. N. S. Sports Editor)

DETROIT, Oct. 4—(INS)—This is the morning after the awful blow which hit 42,505 paid customers right on the nose yesterday afternoon and which saw the Detroit Tigers put on an exhibition which was downright frightful. They did that in the first game of the series yesterday with five errors in the first and one third innings for a series record. Today, they promise better things, as a matter of fact, their antics couldn't be worse.

Today, considerably disconcerted by the events which led up to the Cardinals' 8 to 3 victory in the first game of the series, the Tigers were far from ready to quit. Strangely, neither were the Detroit fans. For some strange and unusual reason they seem to think they have a ball club here and in spite of the fact that old doctor fumble finger, the all-American drawback, was all too common in the Tiger ensemble yesterday, everybody around here seemed to feel that it was pretty much of a big mistake.

Their idea was that schoolboy Rowe, the young man who won 16 straight by the grace of providence and a few base hits, was just the party to stop the rampant Cardinals today.

Rowe, quite a young man with a dark, brown background, hoped to find the day pretty much to his liking. It was a dark, brown day. Nevertheless, the feeling was that the Cardinals, team of destiny, either couldn't or wouldn't go wrong. They clipped Crowder for three runs yesterday and Marberry and Hogsett for four in one inning, with the result that they have pegged the Tigers as a cinch.

The Tigers are not a cinch ball club. Strangely and as a matter of fundamental fact, no outfit that supplies eight 300 hitters can be a cinch ball club. They are, just as they seemed yesterday, merely a little too good for a club that placed nearly all its dependence on sheer power.

The point is that all the sports writers make a mistake. They keep comparing team for team, whereas it should be league for league. All anyone need add for instance is that the best team in the American League, under present conditions, might very well be the worst in the National.

For purposes of this series, the National League entry has decided to be very large. It has already announced Bill Hallahan as its second game pitcher and thereby has defeated the predictions of all experts. The latter agreed that Paul Dean was and should be the starting pitcher for the second game. But, for reasons quite unknown, the Cardinal board of strategy has cast its all on the little left hander with the little curve.

They evidently believe that Hallahan has reclaimed enough of his fast one and curve to get by. Whether they're right or not is unimportant compared to the fact that the Tigers, on their performance of yesterday, are a cinch for the easiest pitcher in baseball.

The day dawned bright and clear, with off in the east a dull gray sky, threatening at any moment, to spoil everything with a spot of rain. A crowd of 42,000 undaunted by the gray skies, are going to be out there again watching the fracas.

Overnight, of course, the odds have gone in for a violent revision. The Cardinals were two to one in the very light betting that prevailed downtown and the general belief was that, if anybody cared to cast an odd hundred on the Tigers, they would be more than a mere civic enthusiast. They'd have to be a downright lunatic.

Altogether, yesterday's game was an object lesson in deportment. One club conducted itself as a champion should. The other looked like something that was dragged in out of the wet by a street cleaner's broom.

It didn't seem possible that the Tigers could be so bad. In fact, that was the judgment of this very excited and still perturbed town, which continued to believe in its ball club and was disinclined to receive tidings to the contrary.

If Greenberg was a bad first baseman, it was all news to Detroit. If Rogell was strictly a hit and miss ball player, the impression was that he had had a trying day.

Briefly, Detroit's story was that the St. Louis Cardinals, in winning the opening game of the series, had merely started something that would have to be stopped by others.

New Man of Destiny

By BURNLEY

ACCORDING to the estimable James Joy Johnston, who is the Madison Square Garden promoter and a pretty shrewd home when it comes to judging cauliflower, there is only one man among the present crop of heavyweight contenders who really rates a good chance against Max Baer. A large knuckle knocker from the wilds of Minnesota named Art Lasky is the gent in question.

Master Johnston thinks Lasky has just the style to trouble Baer, should he ever be so fortunate as to get a crack at that daffy Romeo of the squared circle.

The tall Minnesota Thunderer, who gets his first whack at a big time when he meets Steve Hamas tomorrow night at New York's Madison Square Garden, may be Louisiana's new Man of Destiny.

Oddly enough, there is more than a little similarity between Lasky and the man whom he aspires to dethrone. Many critics have noticed in Lasky something of a facial and physical resemblance to Baer. Like the present champion, Art is tall and broad-shouldered, with curly black hair, high cheekbones and a fairly prominent if slightly dented proboscis.

WE DON'T EXPECT YOU TO BELIEVE THIS

In the office building where we are situated, there are several window cleaners who come around once a week to wash the windows in our offices. One of these men—Sam Jones—is insured in our company.

As he was washing the outside of a window on the top floor of the building, his foot accidentally slipped and he plunged headlong into the street. As he passed our floor on his trip downward he was handed the money due him on his policy!

Of course, as we said, we hardly expect you to believe this—but it is an illustration of the promptness with which we settle our claims. Accidents will happen and you never know when one will strike you.

Take out a policy today before it is too late—and pay your premiums promptly.
